

of aesthetic feeling, a clearer perception of the chains by which logic leads us to true—or, it may be, to false—conclusions, a finer lucidity of expression; but we should lose the industrious spadework which is disputing with Nature the conformation of the earth, and is establishing conditions of comfort and cleanliness, not only for a privileged few, but for the masses of the people.